During the past year the Executive in more than one instance was required to exercise the pardoning power because the convict was not properly defended, and the record in each instance clearly showed that there was practically a denial of the right of counsel. The presumption of innocence attaches alike to the opulent and the indigent, and a constitutional provision that guarantees the right to appear and defend in person and by counsel is derided and disregarded when some person is selected where the accused is in indigent circumstances who is thoroughly ignorant of elementary legal principles, as is often the case. Courts are not to blame for this. If the legislature did not provide for the appointment of counsel in the case of indigent persons, and did not provide for the compensation to be paid, the court would be at liberty to select counsel to represent persons charged with crime whose competency would qualify them to protect the accused in the enjoyment of his constitutional and statutory rights. With the compensation provided the court is required to select an order of professional excellence in keeping with the sums allowed.

Section 1892 of the Penal Code which provides as compensation a sum not to exceed fifty dollars in capital cases, and in other cases of felony a sum not exceeding twenty-five dollars and in all other cases a sum not exceeding ten dollars should be unconditionally repealed, or else amended so that sums reasonable in amount be named to secure professional services to protect indigent defendants in the enjoyment of their lives and liberty.

Very truly yours,
